THE SEMANTICS OF ENGLISH LOANWORDS IN POLISH

The semantics of loanwords investigates the processes affecting the meaning of lexical items borrowed from one language into another.

These items, as is generally known, have usually more than one lexical path consisting of several semantic markers and distinguishers in a single dictionary entry in the sense of J. J. Katz and J. A. Fodor 1963. However, lexical items are never borrowed from one language into another as complete dictionary entries but only in concrete life situations in one of their senses, i.e. in the form of a concrete path. If a word has been borrowed in more than one situation, it may have more than one sense in the borrowing language, and consequently the dictionary entry of this word in the borrowing language will have more than one path.

The semantic adaptation of loanwords in the borrowing language is not only limited to the quantitative reduction of lexical paths in a dictionary entry as described above but it also affects the internal structure of such an entry modifying its paths by the addition or deletion of a semantic marker, distinguisher or restriction. This leads to the phenomena traditionally known under the headings of the narrowing, extension and shift of meaning.

The narrowing can be illustrated by the word koks 'tea biscuit' (from E. coke), the extension by the word farcers [2] 'afternoon party' (not necessarily beginning at five o'clock) (from E. five o'clock), and the shift by dżungla [paragus] 'insurmountable mass of regulations' (from E. jungle).

English loanwords in Polish represent a wide range of various fields of life.
The most numerous are the so-called exotics, i.e. the lexical items referring to the typical products of English culture, politics, social structure, etc., e.g., wigowie (E. Whig), toryi (E. Tories), lunch (E. lunch), cricket (E. cricket), etc.

In the present paper English loanwords have been divided into twelve groups, from the point of view of their meaning, the first eleven comprising related items. If necessary further subdivisions have also been provided. It should be remembered, however, that our classification is arbitrary and does not pretend to be either exhaustive or definite. Its ultimate purpose is to create a working framework for a convenient semantic presentation of lexical loans in a language.

1. SPORTS AND GAMES

Sports and games have contributed generously to the increase of English loanwords in Polish. Most of English sports terms entered Polish in the 19th and the 20th centuries.

(a) General terms: sport (E. sport), challenge 'a type of contest' (E. challenge), derby 'match between two local teams' (E. derby), atlet 'a long-distance runner' (E. athlete), dice 'sportsman's clothing made of flannel' (E. dress), faul (E. foul), finis (E. finish), handicap (E. handicap), klub (E. club), mecz (E. match), mistrz (E. meeting), oldboy 'older competitor who has retired from regular sports activities and participates in competitions rarely and irregularly' (E. old boy), raid 'sudden individual attack' (E. raid), rekord (E. record), sportmen (E. sportsman), stand (E. stand), team (E. team), trener 'coach' (E. trainer), trenir (E. training), trenowac (E. train), walkower (E. walk over), dopingu (E. doping).
